Vaginal speculum is a gynecological instrument which is used by doctors to conduct pelvic exams on women.

The auvard weighted vaginal speculum is used inside the vagina. It comes with a weight which can be separated for use. This speculum has one blade and it helps in keeping the vagina open so that the gynecologist can work with both hands free.

When a pelvic exam is being conducted, gynecologists use the auvard weighted vaginal speculum which is made out of steel so that these can be sterilized and reused.

The auvard weighted vaginal speculum for example can only be used in expanding the vaginal cavity so that the surgeon can easily see what the problem may be if the patient is experiencing some abnormal bleeding or pains. It is also used when a general pelvic exam may be conducted so that the health of the patient's uterus can be examined and it can be checked whether the internal female reproductive system is functioning properly.
